- Camille has been working as a consultant in Diabetology at the Yaoundé Central Hospital since 2021 where she consults and follows up outpatients with diabetes. She is also a Research Associate at the Health of Populations in Transition research group and her research interest is in the prevention of non communicable diseases through modification of dietary and physical activity behaviours.
- Camille holds an MD from Université des Montagnes in Cameroon, and a PhD in Epidemiology from the University of Cambridge. She also holds an MSc in Clinical Biochemistry and a Postgraduate Diploma from Harvard Medical School.
- She lives in Cameroon. In her free time she enjoys watching movies and playing with her 6-months old baby. Her special relaxing method is having deep conversations with people.
